BROGGI TO APPEAR ON TV DRAMA OF SANFORD'S STORY

The events which led to the closing of the textile mills in Sanford, Maine, and the way in which the people in that city banded together to meet the situation and bring in new industry, will be televised dramatically over NBC-TV's nation-wide hook-up on the Armstrong Circle Theatre, Tuesday evening, Nov. 29, 9:30-10:30 p. m. est.

Another in the Armstrong series of "actuals"—dramatizations of actual happenings and experiences in the lives of real people—the drama will be entitled "The Town That Refused to Die," researched and written for television by Sheldon Stark. Central figure in the TV play will be Carl Broggi, former State Senator and currently Maine State Commissioner of Industry, who at the time when the Sanford textile mills were beginning their initial lay-offs, insisted on the formation of a Sanford Chamber of Commerce to meet any potential employment emergencies.

Only a handful of citizens supported Broggi, who at the time was considered a "prophet of doom" by many who believed the lay-offs at the mill were only temporary. As events turned out, Broggi and his crew were right, and only a short time after mill officials announced their decision to move South, Sanford had ten new industries.

Included in the dramatic elements of the script are the effects of the lay-off on some 150 originally put out of work. Plant officials felt that 100 out of thousands still employed was not a great number—but to those out of work for a number of months, it meant a great deal as their savings dwindled.

Under Broggi's direction, the newly-formed Chamber of Commerce compiled figures on the city's employment record, including the fact that there had never been any labor discord; statistics on the education of Sanford citizens, showing how their aptitude and intelligence would be vital to an industry moving into the city; and figures on the cost of water, heat, taxes and other items important to the companies seeking a new place to establish.

Broggi himself will appear at the conclusion of the drama to reiterate his belief in Sanford and Sanford's belief in itself, which made it possible for the city to stay alive and flourish at the most crucial period in its history.

RECEPTION FOR MR. AND MRS. RODERICK McMILLIN

The presence of all the townspeople, including many of the children, at a reception given in William Bingham Gymnasium on Thursday evening of last week, told us what we already knew, folks were out to honor the most popular newly weds of the season, Mr. and Mrs. Roderick B. McMillin. The gym was gay with decorations of harvest splendor and colorful foliage arranged by Mrs. George Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. McMillin, attended by their mothers, Mrs. Virgie McMillin and Mrs. Aldele Paradis of Lisbon Falls, welcomed their many guests. Edmond Vachon of Gould Academy faculty was host and master of ceremonies.

Pupils of the grade schools delighted to show their love for "Mush," whose generosity and kindness they so often enjoy, presented the following excellent program:

COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

A short time ago one of the light engineers of the Central Maine Power Co. told me they were willing to install four Mercury Vapor Lights in town for a trial period.

No additional charge until you people have opportunity to give them a good trial, an idea and winter until the annual town meeting in March.

I expect they will be installed next week, one at the intersection of Main and Broad Streets, one at the intersection of Church and Railroad Streets near the overhead bridge, one at the intersection of Main and Railroad Streets and one at the intersection of Main and Mechanic Streets.

The present lights on Main Street give 6,000 lumens of light at a cost of $55 per year, one of the new Mercury Vapor Lights will give 20,500 lumens of light at a cost of $105.00 per year if you people decide to retain them after next town meeting.

We will appreciate having you watch these four samples and let us know what you think of them.

GUY BUTLER RESIGNS AS MPB MANAGER

James M. Acheson of Augusta, President of the State of Maine Publicity Bureau, announced today that John C. Page, Jr., of Gorham has been appointed Executive Manager of the Bureau effective January 1, 1956, replacing Guy P. Butler of Portland whose resignation becomes effective on that date.

Mr. Butler is principal owner of The Bethel Inn.

Mr. Page, a native of Massachusetts, has been a member of the Maine Publicity Bureau staff for more than fifteen years, and has held the position of Field Manager since January, 1948. In announcing the appointment, Acheson expressed the pleasure of the Board of Directors at finding it possible to promote a man of Pages calibre and experience from within the organization.

In a formal statement, following the announcement, Acheson said that Butler's resignation as Executive Manager, because of the pressure of his private business affairs, had been before the Board of Directors since the early part of the summer, but that it had not seemed advisable to attempt a change in the management of the Bureau's wide-spread activities during the busy summer season.

Acheson stated that Butler's resignation would be formally accepted at the next Director's meeting with very sincere regret. He pointed out that the Bureau, a voluntary membership organization for the promotion of Maine's natural attractions, has grown from about 400 members in 1940 when Butler was first appointed to more than 5,000 at the present time, and that it has become one of the largest organizations of its kind in the country with an annual budget of more than $100,000.00, none of which is derived from Legislative appropriations.

Read John 10:24-30.
Neither death, nor life, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. (Romans 8:38, 39.)

We take so much for granted. We think of the breathtaking beauty of autumn, of meandering streams and blue skies. Consider life itself; our family, our friends, and the love we share. Such beauties and blessings He designed for mankind. This is God's world.

God's life is in our lives. Only as we sense His life about us and in us do we feel His abiding love. Jesus is our example of perfect love, for he alone revealed the love of God in every realm of living. Countless Christians from the Apostles to Paul of old to Albert Schweitzer today have inspired the world with their love. God's great love living and ruling in them. All such live while alive.

We do take so much for granted, you and I. Nevertheless, as long as life is ours, the heavenly father showers us, each new day, with the glory of His love. In return, ought we not to live for Him?

Prayer

Eternal God, Thou hast done for us above all that we can ask or think. We give Thee thanks for life, for love, for family, for friends, and for Thy beautiful world. Help us this day to live for Thee; through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Thought For The Day

When God rules our lives, we have deeper appreciation of His beauty, goodness, and bounty.

Ideas from other editors

From the Seville Chronicle, Seville, Ohio: Are you a newcomer to the community? A lot of people are. Do you find that people here aren't quite as friendly as you had hoped they might be, that you still feel a stranger after months in the community?

If you do, don't blame it entirely on the town. Part of it may be you. How many times have you attended church or Sunday school since moving here? Will you attend PTA meetings? . . . If you have children in school? Do you still drive back "home"—meaning the community in which you used to live at some time?

When your next door neighbor may be waiting to get acquainted with you? Where do you shop? Local storekeepers do an amazing job of information exchange for regular customers.

We ask newcomers the above questions to remind them that making friends is not a one way job in a small community. We of necessity live close to one another's private lives here. We have no professional greeters, and we tend not to annoy people who don't appear to want to talk to us.

Another thing, a lot of those unfriendly "old residents" you want to meet probably moved out here from Cleveland, Akron or other spots not long ago themselves, and they probably think you are an unfriendly old resident. Because the trend to suburban living has caused a tremendous influx, and a complete change of faces, in towns like Seville since the end of World War II.

So try again before you label a town unfriendly. And speed up your reflexes a little; the editor of this paper will grin at about anything he meets if it will grin back at him. And ask questions! All Sevilleans love to be considered experts on most anything! Your new neighbors are just as nice as you are—sure we are!

Dearborn, Mich.: Suppose you were in a roomful of people who were asked to split up into groups of producers, consumers, or investors. Into which groups would you go? You could become a case for a psychologist, with a three-way personality split, if you seriously tried to decide. Because we're all producers of goods or services; we're all consumers, and all who have money in a savings account, pension fund or insurance policy are investors.

In our economic system, the producer, the consumer, and the investor are not three separate individuals, with conflicting interests. The roles are interdependent. . . . The three parts of our economic system prosper together.

Economic Highlights . . . . .

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

If, a comparatively short time ago, anyone had predicted that we were on the verge of a $400,000,000 economy (which means that we would turn out goods and services of that value in a year) almost unbridled optimism. Yet the other day Dr. Arthur F. Burns, Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, expressed confidence that we will not only reach that mark but go well beyond it. And Dr. Burns is a highly regarded expert, with a reputation for caution when it comes to making forecasts. Current experience backs him up—in the third quarter of this year our production was at the annual rate of $391,000,000, far above the same period in 1954.

In one of his recent syndicated columns Robert S. Allen described an "inside report" on business thinking made by another top official—Dr. Gabriel Hauge, Administrative Assistant to the President on Economic Affairs. Dr. Hauge also stressed the magic $400,000,000 figure, and said that it will be reached this quarter and exceeded another year. Actual production has been outstripping past government estimates by a spectacular margin. According to Mr. Allen, Dr. Hauge's summary was strongly confident about everything in the economic picture with the exception of agriculture. And this problem, Dr. Hauge is reported to have said, is particularly bothersome for political reasons. He added that there is no Administration plan for abandoning Secretary Benson's flexible price support program—that, instead, the effort will be made to safeguard and strengthen it.

Nothing is more dangerous than long-range economic forecasting, indeed who would state categorically that the U. S. economy can go up and up ad infinitum. But it is a fact that we made the transition from active war to peace without the big downturn that many thought inevitable. The comparatively mild post-Korean decline was brief, and since then, with few exceptions, the indicators have been rising.

Newsweek recently listed a few of the good signs. In September construction totaled a record $4,000,000,000. Employment hit a peak for that month of 64,700,000. As of a late date, manufacturers' backlogs of orders were 10 per cent above a year ago. And industries of all kinds are undertaking and planning huge expansion programs.

Finally, in a recent speech, Vice President Nixon listed "elements of strength which assure further progress." He emphasized that our recent expansion has come primarily through activities of private rather than government enterprise; that it is based on the normal foundations of peace rather than the crisis demands of war; and that our prosperity has a broad base, with 70 per cent of the total income going to labor. These and other factors led him to say: "With this solid foundation, we need not fear for America's future. As long as we are not panicked into doing things wrong, as long as we avoid the panaceas—the economic pop pills with the awful side-effects—and as long as we remain true to the economic principles which have made America great, we can face the future with courage and confidence."

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

Gilbert, Neb. Reporter: "A government bureau is where the taxpayer's shirt is kept."

Blahon, Calif. Inyo Register: "How are your horses today? These 63 horses that do so much work around the house for you. The horses referred to are those used to designate the amount of mechanical energy—horsepower—used by the average American homemaker in her toaster, vacuum cleaner, electric washing machine, refrigerator and all those other wonderful adjuncts to the better life contributed by American inventive genius."

Torrington, Wyo. Telegram: "The newspaper boy gets an education from his 'going.' He learns to know people, he learns the ingredients of the process of preparing and distributing a product of vital importance to all Americans. That's why it happens so often that the newspaper boy comes out a little bit ahead by any standard of values. He has learned by doing."

WHY YOUR MILK IS SO HIGH

In many places milk prices are not artificially high by law or by monopolies sanctioned by law, say the editors of Changing Times, The Kiplinger Magazine. Practically every innovation that would make milk cheaper and more convenient to buy has been fought by big dairies, farm and union groups and hampered by obsolete sanitary regulations.

Ten states fix consumer prices and over 80 cities scattered through the center of the country still regulate the supply and the price paid to farmers in adjacent farm areas known as milk sheds. Milk produced in low-cost dairy areas is deliberately prevented from flowing into high-cost areas where there is a potential demand. And new, and more efficient methods of packaging and distribution are everywhere hamstrung by entrenched interests.

High prices to local farmers naturally encourage them to produce more. In a free market this increased production would bring lower prices and eventually cause a cut-back in production. But since the market is not free, high prices tend to cause overproduction and the federal government obligingly buys the excess and stores it or gives it away.

Artificially high prices in local milk sheds might be expected to draw cheaper, more efficiently produced milk from big dairy states, but this is prevented by several schemes. One is known as compensatory payments. If a handler in a large city on the East Coast wants to buy a tankload of cheaper milk from the Midwest, he may do so but must pay his local farmers the difference between the price of the imported milk and his city's price.

Another way of keeping milk from reaching its best markets consists of a maze of sanitary regulations that in cases are really economic barriers in disguise. It is essential that health departments in every city and state check milk for purity and inspect dairy farms and bottling plants. But in many places the regulations are used, not only to insure wholesome milk, but to protect the interests of local farmers, big dairies and unions.

The commonest complaint is that health departments won't accept milk for outside areas even though it is produced under comparable sanitary regulations. Some cities establish geographic limits beyond which they will not go to inspect farms or handling plants.

There are restrictions on packaging and selling too. Big dairies with home-delivery routes and also milk drivers' unions naturally want the price of store milk kept high. They also oppose paper cartons, half-gallon and gallon containers, vending machines and milk dispensers. Thus despite the fact that the cost of delivering milk to a store is 3 or 4 cents less than that of delivering to a home, prices are the same for both in many cities. In others, the differential is only a cent or two while in a few cities, the law of economics is completely flouted, and paper cartons bought in stores cost more than bottles delivered to homes. But in big cities where free competition has won out, store milk is 2 to 3 cents a quart cheaper.

What the Consumer Can Do: It's up to the consumer to make a change. Support the U. S. Public Health Service's model set of health regulations for milk which gives citizens of any city or country protection, and its system facilitating the free flow of milk everywhere. Attend public hearings to protest price fixings. Take advantage of price savings when and wherever possible. Lastly, encourage those few enterprising businessmen who are trying to break through the network of monopolies fixing milk prices.

Sandersville, Ga., Progress: "Some merchants think they have to do something offensive before they lose a customer. Taint so according to the National Retail Grocers Association. Of every 100 customers put on the books of any store in any one year, only 19 of the original customers remained after 10 years. . . . Merchants who believe 'everyone knows where my store is' might ponder these figures and seek more new customers through planned newspaper advertising in the home town newspaper."

DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

BERTHA EDMUNDS, Clifford, Oregon, says that during World War I she had had to leave school to go to work on the farm. When she finally went back to school one of her cousins made those school days miserable by constantly telling her and others that she was too old to go to school, adding that she was only trying to get out of work. She finally won her mother to her way of thinking, and again left school. Then for thirteen years she clerked in a general store, which she loathed. She spent her spare time studying. Then for thirteen more years she cared for her parents and managed a three-acre farm, which was not profitable. Shortly after her mother's death, she was left without funds.

Past middle-age, she was barred from many a lucrative position. Where would she go? What could she do to earn a living? She had no one to confide in and she worried.

So she counted her blessings. Instead of being resentful against her cousin, she thanked God for her blessings.

By and by all resentment disappeared from her thinking, and she began to believe with Epictetus, the Slave, that "Life is a feast, to which God has invited us. God does not like guests who find fault with the fare, but them who know how to thank Him for the feast."

Her conditions now are much the same—but she is not.

Perhaps, a portrait of you — the one your family's been begging for?

Because, at Christmas time, a portrait is a greeting and a gift that only you can give... and no other present will mean so much, for so many years.
